Description

Intercultural communication refers to the interaction between people of different cultural background. It is an inseparable part of foreign language teaching as the latter pays more attention to students' intercultural communication skills instead of language skills only. The course is designed to help foster a positive attitude toward other cultures. Students have to bear in mind the difference to develop students' adaptability to other cultures as the only way to continue communication is to reduce the impact of culture shock when they first encounter another culture. Besides, it also aims to develop students' intercultural communication skills, as with China's opening up more people are having intercultural experiences, which has generated a growing demand for intercultural communication skills.
